DURATION: one year; can be renewed.

TUTOR: Prof. Alessandro D'ADDA.

TITLE OF THE RESEARCH TOPIC: Business warranties in the sale of company shares and contract law.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE RESEARCH TOPIC: The research will have to investigate the issue of the legal qualification and the regulation of business warranties normally provided for in contracts governing the sale of company shares. The theme will have to be analyzed both from a dogmatic and conceptual point of view, in order to achieve a thorough systematic framework for the problem in the light of the categories of contract law, and from an operational perspective. From the latter point of view, the research will have to take into consideration the issues arisen from negotiating practice (also taking into account courts and arbitration case law) which need solutions on a strict contract-law level. The aim of the research is to outline, in the light of a solid conceptual reconstruction of the positive data, a framework of organic and coherent rules which fully regulates the events related to business warranties. The selected candidate will carry out his research activity within the department of Private and public economics law of the Catholic University of the Sacred Heart in Milan.

TITLE OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: Assessment of socio-economic impact of reintroduction of crayfish in the north western Apennine.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: The aim of the project are: 1) restoring depleted habitats in north western Apennine, and 2) reintroducing an endangered indigenous species, the indigenous crayfish, in these areas. In order to evaluate the socio-economic effects of this project, we must consider, first, costs and revenues generated by the project, in particular those affecting local economies; these data will be evaluated using appropriate market surveys. However, they are simply one part of total economic effects. For this reason, in order to quantify all costs and benefits, further research will require to identify the values of main ecosystem services generated by the project and to quantify the increase in the value of these ecosystem services generated by the implementation of the project, through an ex-ante and an ex-post evaluation.

FACOLTÀ DI PSICOLOGIA

ACADEMIC DISCIPLINE: M-PSI/01 GENERAL PSYCHOLOGY	n. 1 position
---	---------------

DURATION: one year; can be renewed.

TUTOR: Prof. Alessandro ANTONIETTI.

TITLE OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: Poly-unsaturated fatty acids and developmental dyslexia: correlations with cognitive performance and effects of supplementation in addition to neuropsychological treatment.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: One of the most supported hypotheses for the aetiology of specific learning disorders (SLD), in particular of developmental dyslexia (DD), concerns an impairment of the magnocellular system, i.e., the part of the visual and auditory systems specialized in processing stimuli with high temporal frequency and low spatial frequency and specifically devoted to the extraction of movement and position information. It has been shown that the magnocellular system is sensitive to the intake of polyunsaturated fatty acids (PUFAs) through diet: subjects with magnocellular deficits would improve their performances if their daily intake of PUFAs present in fish oils and in some vegetable oils (omega-3 and omega-6 substances) is increased. Lower PUFA levels in individuals with DD could depend on diet. The aim of the project is to assess the efficacy of PUFA supplementation in addition to neuropsychological intervention delivered through the web platform Tachidino. In particular, the study aims to define the exact difference in the effectiveness of neuropsychological treatment with and without supplementation; furthermore, to study the relationships between initial PUFAs levels in the blood and initial and final performances in reading and writing tests; finally, the initial and final performances in tests of magnocellular-related functions, that is, visual, attentional, and executive functions, will be investigated. Phase 1. 100 school-age children in (7-15 years-old) with a diagnosis of DD according to international diagnostic criteria and 25 typically developing children matched on age, sex, and nonverbal IQ will be enrolled in the study. The scores obtained in reading, writing, metaphonological abilities, auditory and visual stimuli analysis, selective attention, and interfering response inhibition of all the subjects will be collected; Recent and past data about dietary habits and PUFA blood levels will be collected as well. Phase 2. DD subjects will be divided into four groups of 25 participants each (randomized assignment):

- group 1 will be treated with Tachidino telerehabilitation protocol, based on Bakker's Balance model, preceded by two months of daily supplementation with PUFAs.
- group 2 will be treated with Tachidino telerehabilitation protocol and placebo.
- group 3 will be treated only with daily supplementation of PUFAs.
- group 4 will be treated only with daily placebo administration.

Phase 3. At the end of the intervention period all the participants will be re-tested following a double-blind design with the same tests used in phase 1. Data obtained in Phase 3 will be compared with the ones collected in Phase 1 to obtain differential measures that could be compared between the 4 groups. The results will allow the design of more specific and individualized rehabilitation programmes, based on the characteristics and the neuropsychological profiles of each subject. Furthermore, they will allow a better comprehension of the relationships between PUFAs and cognitive performances/neuropsychological functioning and better clinical management of Specific learning disorders (SLD). The research activity will be carried out at the Bosisio Parini (LC) unit of IRCCS Eugenio Medea.

FACOLTÀ DI PSICOLOGIA

ACADEMIC DISCIPLINE: M-PSI/01 GENERAL PSYCHOLOGY	n. 1 position
---	---------------

DURATION: one year; can be renewed.

TUTOR: Dott.ssa Claudia REPETTO.

TITLE OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: INSPECT - Inner speech converter technology.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: Inner speech, i.e., the ability to express thoughts in verbal form without producing any sound, is one of the most characterizing ability of humans. Several pathologies such as speech apraxia may however impair the process of externalization of speech, i.e., the control of the complex array of elements constituting the articulatory apparatus, necessary for emitting sounds. The impact on quality of life is dramatic. This project aims at gathering the basis of knowledge necessary to the construction of a neuroprosthetic device which may enable impaired subjects (e.g., with locked-in syndrome) to communicate verbal thought bypassing the articulatory apparatus. The candidate will conduct an extensive and comprehensive psycholinguistic analysis of the stimuli that will be later used in the following research steps. Frequency, concreteness and imageability (how easy it is to create a mental image of the word), are typical psycholinguistic features to consider. However, along with those features, the candidate will assess other aspects that can impact the way our brain responds to a linguistic stimulus: the emotional and motor content, the linguistic focus and the perspective according to which the listener understand the semantic content of the sentence. The candidate must have a specific expertise, supported by cv, in planning and conducting (including data analyses) experimental studies employing behavioural and neuroscientific tools (EEG; TMS). In addition (s)he should be able to create online surveys and consult psycholinguistic database and corpora.
