TITLE OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: Impact entrepreneurship.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: Entrepreneurship is a key factor for economic and social development. Recently, studies in the stream of entrepreneurship research have paid increasing attention to the concept of “impact entrepreneurship”, referring thereby to the growing number of entrepreneurial initiatives aimed at combining generation of economic wealth for shareholders and socio-environmental impact. The research project aims to study strategies, business models and managerial processes of for-profit, not-for-profit and hybrid enterprises, with a particular focus to African countries. The research will be part of the international debate on the role of companies in the pursuit of the United Nations Sustainable development goals.

TITLE OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: Analysis of the impacts of italian media projects on the contemporary chinese market.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: The exposure of chinese audiences to foreign media products has undergone substantial increases with the advent of the Internet in the 90s and mass broadband in the first half of the 2000s. Analyzing the impacts (i.e. the ability to generate value, both financially and discursively) of the Italian cultural product within the largest media market in the world is not only of academic interest, but also economic for the country-system. In the framework of PRIN 2017 “Italian narratives: the Italian brand through contemporary media in a global perspective” (of which the Milan-Catholic unit is coordinated by Prof. Tarantino), the research project will analyze the reception of a sample of media content (film, television and editorial) distributed or otherwise circulating on the Chinese audiovisual market. The research will focus on the 2010-2020 period. Combining quantitative and qualitative approaches, the research analyzes for each product discursive spaces and their interrelationships, the specific narratives articulated around the product and the practices articulated by the spectators (e.g. subtitling, reassembly etc.). On the other hand, it will collect interviews with privileged observers of the processes of building and maintaining these speeches and practices, such as local distributors, critics, managers of fan communities, organizers of cultural events, bloggers. Particular attention will be paid to the dissemination of results.

TITLE OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: Empowerment through liquid Integration of migrant youth in vulnerable conditions.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: The project - funded by the European Union's Horizon 2020 Framework programme - has a main aim to explore the experiences and subjective perspectives of young migrants in vulnerable conditions coping with specific life stages and events, in a context of diverse and complex life trajectories and shifting welfare systems, and to contribute to in-depth knowledge of personal, family and social processes and to better inform public policy and to promote innovative interventions. The research will be conducted in two territorial areas (in Northern Italy and in Central-Southern Italy) which will be identified on the basis of specific demographic, socio-economic and socio-political indicators. The investigation methods used belong to social psychology discipline and their purpose is to carry out an empirical research on different subgroups of young migrants in vulnerable conditions (NEET, asylum seekers and refugees...) living in areas with different endowments of resources and involved in. The data will be collected through focus group interviews (involving young migrants and their parents), in-depth face to face interviews and participatory action research where young migrants will be trained and prepared. The candidate needs psycho-social skills and background especially in carrying out studies with vulnerable people

TITLE OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: Development of services for the monitoring and the management of the value chain of industrial tomato.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: The general objective of the project is to make the role of the I.O. of Industrial tomato more and more central in the process that generates information to support the supply chain, so as to be able to manage it and play a leading role as a hinge between the agricultural and industrial world for ever greater enhancement of industrial tomato market. Another objective of the project is to have real-time data on tomato quantities delivered to the industries and their quality levels, so as to improve tomato logistics. In this context, the research fellow will deal with the development of the following services: geolocate the productions and check their health and maturation status; collect information to estimate the quantity-quality level of production; speed-up data collection to formulate forecasts and for better control of the production phase and for better organization of logistics; evaluate how information technologies, satellite earth observation and production forecasting based on crop growth models are able to enrich a platform managed by the I.O. that would make available to associates numerous data by improving the information service and consequently relationships within the supply chain. The candidate will be assessed on the basis of the IT skills necessary for the realization of the aforementioned services and knowledge of the agronomic and physiological aspects of industrial tomatoes.

A general purpose platform for big data management will be used for data collection and elaboration. In the frame of the project, in particular, the candidate will be involved in the analysis of the metrics (specific quality indicators) that need to be optimised along the production chains (products quality, resource efficiency, etc) and in the study of the factors that affect these metrics (weather conditions, Vegetation indexes, preservation techniques, etc). The secondary metabolites (bacteriocins, peptides, phenyllactic acid, diacetyl, hydrogen peroxide) produced by food-related microorganisms such as lactic acid bacteria have an antagonistic action against unwanted or pathogenic microorganisms that helps to improve the so-called shelf life. Their use can be considered as a support system to ensure the safety and conservation of dairy products, thus reducing the use of chemical additives with antimicrobial action.

TITLE OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: Children online: the role of digital skills in promoting social inclusion and wellbeing, while minimising Internet risks.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: The research project will work on the topics of two related H2020 projects: ySKILLS (a RIA) and CO:RE (a CSA). Besides great opportunities, digitisation poses also many dangers/risks for children and young people. There is a lack of scientific data on impacts and contexts of the digital activity of children and adolescents, and we still lack solid knowledge of how to avoid it. The European Union (E.U.) funded ySKILLS project will conduct academic longitudinal survey research in six European countries on risks and opportunities from the information and communication technologies (ICT) uses for children and adolescents between the ages of 12 and 17. The goal is to understand which skills they must obtain to knowingly and critically use ICT for their wellbeing, education, social life and how they can build resistance against negative impacts. The project will enable new strategies and policy recommendations. The overall objective of Children online: Research and evidence (CO:RE) is to conceptualise, implement and disseminate a comprehensive knowledge base on the impact of technological transformations on children and youth. The CO:RE knowledge base will provide evidence on a broad range of topics related to the impact of technological transformations on children and youth including their health, lifestyles, participation and digital citizenship, wellbeing, safety, and security as affected by ICT. It will refer to research from all E.U. Member States and a number of other European countries and thus consider relevant cultural, political, and media-related contexts. This knowledge base will help researchers to identify important research gaps and to make use of existing research and data. At the same time, it will help to contextualise empirical evidence by offering theoretical, methodological, and ethical reflections and guidelines. The CO:RE knowledge base will also be an important focal point for policy-makers and educational actors by identifying key issues that deserve special attention, providing access to a solid data base and thus providing an important basis for policy recommendations and (policy) decision-making processes. Various stakeholder groups are actively involved in the development process in order to tailor the platform to their specific needs. All activities of the project aim to develop an innovative, dynamic and sustainable infrastructure with the CORE platform that will last beyond the duration of the CSA.

TITLE OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: Datafied childhoods: Data traces in family life and the production of future data citizens (DataChildFutures)

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: DataChildFutures will address a largely unexplored aspect of the “datafication of childhood”, namely how it will shape citizenship by transforming citizens’ practices, citizens’ rights, and the imaginaries of citizenship. DataChildFutures will push forward the line of inquiry that analyses datafication at the level of the everyday, and will generate a robust evidence base on the datafication of childhood as a socially situated, everyday and embodied experience. In so doing, it will generate a grounded understanding and novel theorisations of: 1) how children and their families live with data and appropriate surveillance culture (Lyon, 2018); 2) how the digital materialities of data reconfigure our everyday lives into a datafied environment; and 3) how imaginaries of citizenship emerge, are normalised and challenged in the age of datafication. Ultimately, the project will transform our understanding of how datafication reconfigures children’s futures as citizens thanks to an innovative approach that analyses the social consequences of datafication for both doing citizenship and becoming citizens.

TITLE OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: Fashion cultures and food cultures. Convergence and transition toward sustainability.

BRIEF DESCRIPTION OF THE RESEARCH PROJECT: The research is part of a wider field of investigation (theoretical, empirical, and aimed at the design of educational and training modules as well as of third mission’s initiatives) carried out within the MODACULT centre. It covers the changes underway in the fashion and food supply chains. They are areas of material culture proven to be particularly relevant to the economy and Italian identities. The objective of the research is to reconstruct the map of the growing convergence between the two production sectors and their own consumption practices. The research will focus on the peculiar organization forms of their supply chains, the intertwining between them, the forms of communication, especially those that make use of digital resources. Moreover, the development of the embeddedness of the supply chains on a national and international level will be further monitored, in light of the current pandemic crisis. It cannot indeed be over-estimated the interference of the pandemic with the ordinary mobility models on the global scale adopted in both supply chains.
